Dear [Mum/Dad/Uncle/Auntie/Bro/Friend],

There's a web development training starting soon on <https://odurinde.com/web-development/>, and I would really love to attend.

I'm asking for your support either financially or just to help me make it happen because this course is a major opportunity for my career and personal growth.

Web development is one of the most in-demand skills globally. Every business, brand, and organization today needs a website or digital presence. Learning how to build websites opens up job opportunities, freelance gigs, and even the ability to start a small business.

This course will teach me exactly how websites are built, how to maintain them, and how to turn that skill into something useful, profitable, and meaningful. It's hands-on, practical, and will help me become self-sufficient and professionally valuable.

Here's a quick look at what I'll learn:

- Introduction to Web Development
- Git & GitHub (Version Control)
- HTML (Website Structure)
- CSS (Styling Websites)
- Responsive Web Design (For Phones & Screens)
- JavaScript Basics (Website Interactivity)

DOM Manipulation

Backend Development Basics

Advanced JavaScript

By the end of the course, I'll be able to build websites from scratch, work on real projects, and even start earning from it, whether through employment or freelance opportunities.

The instructor is someone with real-world experience, they're a practicing developer, not just a teacher. That means I'll learn real, relevant skills and not just theory.

They've trained people from companies like UAC, Heirs Holdings, Spectranet, and more. The course also only takes 10 people, so it's small and personalized. But that means seats are limited and they're almost full.

I know this will open doors for me, and I really need your support to be able to do this.

Thank you for believing in me.

This means a lot.
